Why Direct Glazed Fiberglass?

Direct Glazed

When a door is direct glazed, the glass is built directly into the door. Without the need for a rim, paint or stain can be applied right up to the edge where the door meets the glass. It also adds years of life to the door, because glass rims are susceptible to wear over time. A direct glazed door offers the best of both fiberglass and wood, appearing handcrafted without the maintenance.

Look of Real Wood

Our Regency direct glazed textured fiberglass doors are professionally stained and sealed. The door texture looks like real wood, but with the durability of fiberglass.

Simulated Divided Lites (SDL)

A further advancement in fiberglass door technology, simulated divided lites (SDL) divides the single piece glass both internally and externally, giving the illusion of a traditionally hand-crafted door with individual panes and well finished edges. Our Legacy collection is the first of its kind—its grille is built directly into the door, creating a seamless effect on the face of the unit.

Why Direct Glazed Fiberglass?

Enhanced Security

Double bore, security plate and solid door edge provide strength. The inside edge of the door contains an oversized laminated stile, making it more secure and feel higher quality.*

Rot-Free System

From the door to the composite frame, this composite unit withstands moisture. Fiberglass wraps the door and frame from edge to edge, forming a weather-resistant barrier.

Superior Durability

Our fiberglass composite door system is dent resistant and reduces heat buildup.

Energy Efficient

Insulated multi-pane glass offers energy efficiency. High performance weather stripping with adjustable sill provides an airtight seal.

*Oversized laminated stile exclusive to Regency and Legacy Collection.
